GREENVILLE COLLEGE

www.greenville.edu

When a student chooses Greenville College, a whole new world opens up to him—especially if small-town living is a new way of life. The town of Greenville, Ill., is a cozy one and home to the 1,000 students of Greenville College. Situated in historic Greenville, the college's signature building, Hogue Hall, was built with bricks made by Greenville students in the 19th century.

Greenville College just welcomed the largest new class in school history this fall when total enrollment topped 1,000 for the first time. With such growth comes construction, and Greenville is planning a new 100-bed residence hall to be ready for students next fall.

A wide variety of study is available at Greenville College, but it's worth noting that Greenville, whose most prominent alums include Jars of Clay (pictured above) is the home of the nationally recognized contemporary Christian music major. Other popular majors include digital media, education, criminal justice, biology and communications.

Greenville is on top of things as the campus was the first in the country to go completely wireless! Students can log on to the Internet and campus network from a laptop anywhere on the campus grounds. The high tech doesn't stop there, as students have access from day one to savvy technology in recording studios, research equipment and computer labs. Greenville is also home to the Bock Sculpture Museum and student-run Blackroom Records.

Students who choose Greenville choose new ideas, personal interaction, bold exploration and remarkable opportunities. All those things that make the college distinct, in combination with Christ-centered education in the liberating arts and sciences, are designed to transform students in preparation for a life of character and service.

HERE at GREENVILLE COLLEGE we believe in REAL EXPERIENCE 101.

BETHEL UNIVERSITY

Lake Valentine and 231 wooded acres in Arden Hills, Minn., give shelter to Bethel University and its traditional undergraduate college, the College of Arts & Sciences. Traced back to the founding of Bethel Seminary in 1871, Bethel's College of Arts & Sciences now enrolls more than 2,900 students and is a leading resource for Christian higher education, ranking No. 14 in U.S. News & World Report's "America's Best Colleges" for top Midwestern universities.

At Bethel, students can explore 66 diverse majors, including the new journalism major that allows students to write for the university's newspaper as well as an actual community paper. In addition, other opportunities to be launched include a semester-long journalism program in Washington, D.C., and a media studies semester at Bethel's New York Center for Art & Media Studies (NYCAMS). Plans are also underway to offer magazine publishing courses in New York City by 2008. This course will allow students to meet magazine publishers and editors, tour publishing companies and make connections for future internships.

Resources such as Bethel's state-of-the-art science labs in physics, chemistry, biology and computer science have led to significant recognition. The physics department was named one of 21 thriving physics programs in the United States by the American Institute of Physics, and nearly 100 percent of chemistry graduates who apply to graduate school are accepted, as well as 95 percent of those who apply to medical school.

Bethel University has many perks available for students: a video production studio, campus radio station and the 1,700-seat Benson Great Hall, one of the premier concert venues in the Upper Midwest. Equidistant to Minneapolis and St. Paul, numerous opportunities for internships and employment, entertainment, professional sports, cultural events and shopping are only 15 minutes away.

"So, Where Are You Going?"

Still wondering what you're going to do with your life? A big first step is contacting Bethel University in St. Paul, Minnesota. God has grand things planned for your life's adventure and Bethel's a great place for discovering and preparing for it. AMERICAN MISSIONARY FELLOWSHIP

www.americanmissionary.org

American Missionary Fellowship is not a typical college experience. The non-denominational, faith-based missions agency is seeking to make a difference in America outside classrooms and through communities. AMF sees America as a great global missions field within its borders. As the cultural and spiritual landscape of the world's "Melting Pot" evolves, it is the passion of AMF to reach the vast unchurched population in America. It is the purpose of AMF, for the next five years, to start new ministries among the unchurched so that no community is left behind. Using a tool called the "Learning Community," AMF creates evangelistic efforts to bring people of common interests together to study the Bible and equip leaders.

Currently, 320 missionaries serve with 10,000 volunteers in various programs that oversee outreach and church plants, pastor missions churches, establish "Learning Communities" and disciple youth and children. Though headquartered in Villanova, Pa., AMF operates in eight strategically located regions through its missionaries and their communities.

Distinguished professor Howard Hendricks of the Dallas Theological Seminary recently commented, "I was most impressed by [AMF's] five-year strategic plan, all too often missing in evangelical planning sessions. [There's] nothing more essential than the establishment of 'Learning Communities'" on the campus grounds.

JOHN BROWN UNIVERSITY

John E. Brown Sr., was a lay minister in the Salvation Army. It was his desire to provide Christian education for students who could not afford college. Today, John Brown University in Siloam Springs, Ark., has the same commitment to needy students and to quality Christian education as it did in 1919.

Over 1,900 students are enrolled in 50-plus bachelor's degree programs and seven master's degree programs. JBU's most unique and largest majors are in digital media arts, engineering, construction management, education, business and communications. In addition, overseas study is an option at Oxford and the Au Sable Institute and in Spain, Greece, Costa Rica and Germany.

Life at JBU outside the classroom extends to academic organizations and groups like the outreach-oriented CAUSE student ministries and the discipleship ministry Passion. For the athlete, JBU offers sports clubs and intramurals as well as intercollegiate sports teams in basketball, soccer, tennis and women's swimming and volleyball.

JBU, a vibrant and growing independent Christian university of the arts, sciences and professions, is dedicated to providing a Christ-centered education that prepares people to honor God and serve others by developing their intellectual, spiritual and professional lives.

Think only missionaries can make converts? Think again.

Many believers know the Lord because their friends cared enough to tell them about Christ. At American Missionary Fellowship, we know the value of established relationships in reaching unchurched Americans. That's why we've designed Learning Communities, evangelistic Bible studies for groups of unchurched people with common interests.

Would you help us start a Learning Community in your community? By combining our 200 years of missions experience with your connections to the people around you, we can make a difference. GRACE UNIVERSITY

www.graceuniversity.edu

An urban campus in the heart of Omaha, Neb., Grace University is a safe, comfortable place where 550 students come to live and learn, and it's only blocks away from Omaha's downtown Old Market district.

Grace University offers a great education at a reasonable cost. Every full-time, on-campus student accepted at Grace receives a generous guaranteed scholarship. As a Christ-centered university, Grace believes that what's in the heart is just as important as what is in the head. Every student graduates with a biblically integrated education and a Christian worldview.

Grace's 14 academic majors include business, teacher education, music, psychology, computer science, communications, pastoral ministry, youth ministry, intercultural studies, nursing and more.

Grace's unique residence hall programs make students a part of a small group that helps make the transition from home to college easier and provides the spiritual nurturing to make year one a great one. Grace has a lively, close-knit campus community with two-thirds of the student body living in residence halls featuring single, double and suite-style living options. Life changes take place everywhere on campus—in the classroom as well as the dorm room, in meetings with faculty and in the campus coffee shop.

Grace University's Servant Leadership Training (SLT) program is the place where students take what they learn in the classroom and apply it to real life through a community service assignment. The daily chapel service provides a common point and place to meet with friends and with God. Even the athletic programs offer special opportunities, as they are both different and better than most Christian college-level programs. Grace's athletic teams compete aggressively and win frequently, including NCCUA national championships, while staying focused on building character. Grace fields athletic teams in men's soccer and basketball and women's volleyball and basketball.

With more than 70 areas of study, an accomplished faculty and a wide range of real-world experiential learning, IWU gives students a solid professional foundation.

IWU has even received national recognition for its approach in aiding students in their transition from high school to college, a method which includes freshmen residence halls, freshmen chapel services, a computer-based advising system and the freshman foundational "World Changers" course.

One of the top reasons students choose IWU is the spiritual atmosphere on campus. The 44 areas of study at SEU include religion, behavioral and social sciences, education, languages, communication arts, music, natural sciences, mathematics and business. Southeastern also provides many opportunities for volunteer service in the surrounding community and overseas. Frequent chapel services, a thriving music program, a student film festival, leadership seminars, Thursday night student life events, honor societies and academic clubs—even outdoor activity groups like Surfers of Faith—all add to the collegiate experience at Southeastern. There are intramural sports for everyone, and intercollegiate teams compete in the NCCAA Division II in men's and women's basketball, men's golf and baseball, women's volleyball and men's and women's soccer.

Good people at work.

Now you can experience Southeastern's exceptional programs from the convenience of your own home or office.
